Human life is inviolable. Quality and excellence in the care of the patients are the goals of nursing practice. Accurate documentation of actions and outcomes of delivered care is the hallmark of nursing accountability. These are the ethical principles, under Section 6 of the Code of Ethics for Nurses, that clearly emphasize on the significance of patient safety.

Given the recent reported incidents on the dengue vaccines that had risked the health and had ultimately, claimed the lives of some Filipino children, the Philippine Nurses Association strongly supports the ongoing investigation to fortify measures that will provide protection to these vulnerable members of our country.

Furthermore, PNA continues to be firm in its advocacy for patient safety, that includes but is not limited to proper drug administration.
